

Press release

«Italy as 14th team at the World Women's Curling Championship»

It has been clear for quite some time that 14 teams will participate in the women's curling world championship in Schaffhausen next March instead of 13 as originally planned. The reason for this is the fact that the planned 13 places could not be distributed completely fair due to the corona-conditioned omission of all qualification tournaments and several nations felt disadvantaged.

As now the World Curling Federation announces on their homepage, the 14th place was given to Italy. Already at a media conference in September, the Schaffhausen organizing committee had suspected that Italy would be considered. As was also announced at that time, the increase means that the Schaffhausen World Championships will have to be extended by one day and will therefore begin on March 19 instead of March 20, 2021 as planned.
